Editorial

Fall Semester 2009 has got off to a brisk start with the induction of 720 fresh students, who enter the doors of the university with the ambition of equipping themselves with the latest knowledge to help them shoulder the responsibilities of future. They would be endeavoring to learn to stand on their own feet, confident and competent enough to tackle their professional responsibilities creditably.

The learned faculty members and the management team at BUITEMS are all out to inculcate in our students a value system which grooms them to become responsible citizens, well-equipped with the skills and proficiency required for successful achievement of goals and objectives, beneficial for the whole country. Many segments of our diverse society are suffering from lack of tolerance and respect of opinions and rights of others. Sublimation of wild sensibilities and adoption of an open-minded approach are the key to social cohesion and mutual progress.

Lack of self assurance about ones capabilities, is such an agonizing malady that it directly affects the brain cells and turns a healthy person into a neurotic. An institution of higher education can make its mark only when there is a clear vision and avowed objectives. BUITEMS is committed to the task of imparting quality education to all her students within the available financial resources but much ahead of the socio-political boundaries.

We at BUITEMS are endeavoring hard to instil in our students all the traits that prepare them for confident, efficient and dignified professional careers. Only those nations are destined to flourish which build in themselves the capability to compete and surge ahead by dint of hard work and industry.
