Editorial

Professional life in higher education necessitates a tremendous learning curve as professionals and faculty within a university are introduced to the new demands and trends associated with their tasks on their respective university positions. Each institution is its own living, breathing unit, and seasoned professionals and faculty require from time-to-time mentoring and career path strategies to foster themselves to grapple the oncoming challenges in higher education. BUIITEMS has raised the vigil for past couple of years to keep a sense of the pulse to nurture its human assets by mentoring and developing them in best ways possible.

BUIITEMS is a comprehensive institution with teaching central to the mission, along with expectations for its professional and faculty to conduct scholarly activities and perform professional service. In general, lack of sufficient scholarly activity followed by inadequate teaching and professional performance have historically been the reasons why these professionals were not promoted or tenured for strategic reasons in any higher academic institutions . Therefore, BUIITEMS has long been realizing the fact that human assets' mentoring, career path activities, and professional development with the help of teaching and scholarship is the key to future performance stability. The overall purpose is, as a collective, to develop and share ways to address the challenges of balancing effective human resource development with active engagement in organizational development for its professionals and faculty.

We, at BUIITEMS, believe that formal human asset mentoring and development programs for professionals and faculty can help our University preempt the issues we may face while progressing forward. Mentoring is widely recognized for fostering success and reducing isolation among professionals. Moreover, departments benefit from improved recruitment and retention, increased investment in human resources and departmental activities, and enhanced work culture.

Balochistan Disaster Management Project (World Bank)

I completed my undergraduate study in Economics in 2008. Soon after, I was employed as a Monitoring, Evaluation and Research Officer at a renowned NGO in Balochistan. Over the years I developed my resume by working in different UN agencies, international, national and government entities in the field of disaster risk management, relief-operations, strategic planning, social-mobilization, education, gender, capacity-building and monitoring & evaluation. My learning and grooming at BUIITEMS provided me with the communication and problem solving tools and skills that allowed me to make the right decisions at my work place. I have been selected as Atlas Corps Fellow USA for January 2015 Cycle at New York.

I also hold several senior positions on behalf of PDMA, serving as the Co-chairperson of all United Nations clusters in Balochistan, Focal Person for the Humanitarian Coordination and Gender and Child-Protection Cell and member of national working group on disaster vulnerability/risk assessment.

Irfan Dawood

Finance Officer in British Council

It is my immense pleasure to record my success story as BUIITEMS Alumni. I completed MBA (Finance) in 2010. Before joining BUIITEMS I was youth leader and volunteer. In 2009 I along with my colleague registered as an organization by the name of TIMES (Targeted Initiatives to Mould and Enlighten Society) affiliated with UNDP and over the years we completed more than 15 projects in Balochistan.

I am employed as Finance Officer in British Council, CYAAD (College of youth activism and development) and financial advisor for different local organizations.

I am really thankful to all the teachers and staff of BUIITEMS who gave me the confidence and made me what I am today.
